Hoover and Curtis
Prosperity—More of It
Coolidge Knew It
Safe at Fifty

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE Republican Ticket, now complete, reads Hoover and Curtis. Senator Curtis from Kansas, whose genial "Howdy, men?" is known to thousands of friends, was nominated on the first ballot, with 1,062 votes.

THIS puts an out-and-out farmers' candidate on the ticket. It does not mean dissatisfaction with General Dawes, for there is none.

The Curtis nomination is an effort to "do something for the farmer."

THE Republican slogan for this campaign is to be "CONTINUED PROSPERITY—AND MORE OF IT."

That's enough of a slogan. People decline to think about more than one thing at a time. And when prosperity is the issue, they don't want any other.

IF Democrats are wise they will promise "continued prosperity—with a great deal more of it than the Republicans ever dreamed of."

IN his fine telegram of congratulation to Herbert Hoover, President Coolidge expresses the thought of citizens—"your great ability and wide experience will enable you to serve your country with marked distinction."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has known for months that Herbert Hoover would be nominated. The president, who has been a candidate for office 20 times and never defeated, understands politics. That is more than you can say for some gentlemen from New York state and elsewhere.

THE Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. yesterday insured a man past 50 for $1,500,000. A few generations ago, when the second biggest city in France had no inhabitant over 50 years of age, such insuring would have been financially suicidal. Men live longer; intelligence counts. A wise man at 50 is a safer risk than a fool at 25. And the Metropolitan has promoted longer living by intelligent health advertising.

OUR prosperity is real. In May, General Motors broke all records, delivering 224,604 cars, the third successive record-breaking month, as announced by President Alfred P. Sloan, Jr. The total sale of cars in May was more than 443,000.

Henry Ford is now turning out his new car at the rate of 5,000 a day.

This country needs 5,000,000 new cars every year at a minimum, even if the total number exceeds the present figures, 24,000,000. Get your car.

IN New York a young man brought into court by his father admitted that he had an income of $400 a week, and employed his father as hostler to take care of his saddle horses. His excuse was that his father had not led a moral life. The Japanese religion, that includes 20 different kinds of hell, probably would find one especially prepared for him that wouldn't include any saddle horses.

DELEGATES, according to H. I. Phillips, watch their steps in hotel lobbies. Several have cut their feet on fragments of broken gin bottles. When a delegate or welcoming friend lets the bottle slip out of the paper crossing the lobby, it breaks on the stone floor.

However, the Republican platform says, "Rigid enforcement of the prohibition law." So there is nothing to worry about.

FUNDAMENTALISTS will read this with joy and hold it under the noses of doubting modernists:

The Munson liner Munamar caught a big tiger shark. Hauled on deck it expelled from its stomach and mouth a good-sized turtle. The turtle is at this moment alive and swimming in New York's aquarium.

If an inferior modern shark can swallow a big turtle and return it alive, why should not a huge fish, created especially for the purpose swallow Jonah, take him ashore and release him less injured than he would have been by a ride in New York's crowded subway?

130 Candidates Are Listed for Marion County Primary As Time for Filing Closes

BOTH PARTIES FACING LIVELY VOTE CONTESTS

Competition for Commissioner First with 13 Seeking Nominations

SEVERAL LATE ENTRIES

Sheriff, Clerk and Representative Each Sought by Nine Contenders

One hundred and thirty candidates for various places on the August primary ballots in Marion County had cast their hats in the political ring when the deadline for filing declarations of candidacy fell last night. Sixty-nine of this number are candidates for the Republican and Democratic County Central Committees and in most cases there is no opposition.

For the 12 offices for which candidates file here, including county offices, state central committeemen, and congress, there are 61 aspirants.

A number of candidates waited until yesterday to file. Until late last night there was no Democratic candidate for prosecuting attorney, but shortly before the polls closed, George Pluchel, Jr. filed his declaration of candidacy for the office and filled the Democratic ticket.

O. M. Bush, Republican, filed yesterday for county treasurer. William H. Uncapher filed for representative to the state legislature. Uncapher is a Democrat. John A. Abel filed as a Democratic candidate for the same office. The death of H. Edmund Hill, a Republican, leaves four Democrats and four Republicans in the race for this office.

Filed on Final Day

Others who filed yesterday include the following:

Carl O. Midlam, Republican, county commissioner for the short term; C. L. Rinker, Democrat, clerk of courts; William J. Thibaut, county commissioner, long term; Andrew D. McIlrain, Democrat representative to the state legislature; Ora M. Baldinger, Republican, representative to the state legislature; Edward L. Lauer Republican, county treasurer; and Harry A. Hoopes, Republican, representative to the state legislature.

The office of county commissioner leads the list in the number of candi-

HOOVER, PLATFORM RAPPED BY NORRIS

Attack Gives Rise to Report Third Party May Be Launched

Washington, June 16—The troubles of the new Hoover-Curtis-Borah Republican setup started today bright and early.

As Secretary Hoover was reading congratulatory telegrams, Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, a leader of the farm bloc, uncorked a ripping attack against the Republican dictators.

Norris boomed defiance with a bitter arraignment of the administration giving rise to reports that a third party is about to be launched.

Nobody from President Coolidge down was excepted from Norris' caustic criticism, and few crimes and misdemeanors were left uncharged to the Republican forces. He assailed the Kansas City platform and nominee and said, "it will be a sad disappointment to every progressive citizen of the country."

"A direct slap is administered to the farmers of the country," Norris said. "Their plea is cast aside with the usual promise of a glittering generality.

"The platform is silent on the domination of our politics, our social activities, our schools and our churches by the secret, disgraceful methods of the water power trust now being discussed before the Federal Trade Commission."

KANSAS CITY LEFT BEHIND BY HAPPY G.O.P.

OFFSETS LOWDEN REBUKE

Coalition Representatives Do Great Deal of "Post-Mortemming" on Convention

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
Star Staff Correspondent

Kansas City, June 16—The Republicans cleared out of Kansas City today a good deal happier and confident than they thought they could be several days ago when angry and embittered farmers were storming at the doors of their national convention.

The nomination of Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas as vice president, the party leaders believe, will do much to allay the bitterness of the radical exponents of farm relief, and the resentful valedictory of Frank O. Lowden that the Republican platform "failed to meet fully and squarely" the needs of the great grain belt.

Curtis has for years marched under the banner "The Farmer's Friend." Kansas lays claim to being the very heart of the great agricultural region that stretches from the Ohio-Indiana line to the Rockies. Curtis voted for the McNary-Haugen bill. It is true that on the question of the veto he voted to sustain the president, but he explained that by saying he deemed it his duty to do so because of his position as Republican leader of the Senate.

Bitterness Apparent

Of the bitterness of the farmers, or the farm organizations, that were represented in Kansas City there can be no doubt. When battalions of them, paid or otherwise, try to storm the doors of a Republican national convention it indicates that the situation, if not actually serious, at least may become so. And the Lowden statement that he did not care to be the nominee on such a platform as the Republicans adopted here was calculated to be oil to the fire.

This is the situation which the Republican leaders believe the nomination of Charley Curtis—and time—will do much to ameliorate.

The talk of "bolt" and the talk of a third party which was everywhere prevalent a few days ago, and even crept into the argument which the agriculturist's spokesmen used before the

DIRECTS OPERATION

Doctor, Facing Death, Superintends Draining of Lung

Chicago, June 16—A doctor who, facing death, calmly directed the draining of his own left lung, is on the road to recovery here today in a hospital.

Dr. Clyde Jensen, 28-year-old pathologist, a week ago, while assisting in an autopsy was infected with bacteria lodging in his lung. Death was imminent, according to other physicians. At the crucial moment he rallied. Fully conscious and directing the work in a weak voice, he superintended the draining of his lung. The three doctors who performed the operation said today Dr. Jensen would recover.

ELEVEN AFTER GOVERNORSHIP ON TWO TICKETS

Total of 63 Seeking Offices at Statewide Primary in August

14 FOR U. S. SENATORS

Opportunity for Filing for Posts Expires; Fess Is Unopposed

Columbus, June 16—Official declarations of candidates for nominations for political offices at Ohio's statewide primaries, to be held on Aug. 14, were on file here today at Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown's office. These declarations include those of 11 candidates for governor, 14 candidates for U. S. Senator and 38 candidates for other state offices.

Opportunity for the filing of these declarations expired last midnight, in accord with Ohio law.

Of the gubernatorial candidates, six are Republicans and five are Democrats. Seven Republicans are candidates for U. S. Senator and six Democrats are seeking the two senatorial togas.

In the G. O. P. primary race, U. S. Senator Simeon D. Fess, Yellow Springs, is unopposed for re-nomination for a second full six-year term; Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown is unopposed in his quest for renomination, and State Treasurer Bert E. Buckley, Dayton, seeking renomination, has no opponent.

Poulson Without Opposition

In the Democratic primary contest, the only candidate who has no opposition is Attorney Francis Poulson, Cleveland, who is seeking the nomination for attorney general.

It is expected that, after the August primaries, Judge Florence E. Allen of the Ohio Supreme Court, will become a candidate for reelection at the November election, by filing a nominating petition.

For governor — Republicans: Congressman James T. Begg, Sandusky; Attorney General Edward C. Turner, Columbus; Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati; Fred Kohler, Cleveland; Harry A. Shanley, Forest; Harry C. Smith, Cleveland, colored.

FARM AID DISCUSSED BY HOOVER, M'NARY

Details of Republican Campaign Slated To Be Mapped Out Today

Washington, June 16—Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill vetoed by President Coolidge, held a long conference with Herbert Hoover, the Republican presidential nominee, at the commerce department today.

McNary said that farm relief was discussed and that he would issue a formal statement later in the day. The Senator was in conference with Hoover for more than an hour.

Many of the big details of the Republican campaign were to be mapped out here in a series of conferences between Hoover, and G. O. P. leaders which start Monday.

James W. Good, of Iowa, Hoover's convention manager is expected to arrive Sunday. A delegation selected from the Republican National Committee will confer with Hoover Tuesday, when the National chairman will be named.

Good is spoken of for chairman of the national committee.

LEVEES BREAK ON ST. FRANCIS, FLOOD FEARED

First Dam To Give Way in Missouri Will Inundate 25,000 Acres

1,000 FAMILIES HOMELESS

Recurrence of Disastrous Floods of 1927 Threatens Two States

Poplar Bluff, Mo., June 16—Recurrence of the disastrous floods of 1927 along the Mississippi River tributaries was feared today as two levees, one on the St. Francis River in Missouri, and a second on the White River in Arkansas gave way.

Water seeping through a stretch of the levee along the St. Francis River north of Kennett, Mo., caused a break in the levee today that sent water pouring through a 150-foot stretch and is believed will inundate 25,000 acres of farm land and make 1,000 families homeless.

The Stevens levee near Newport, Ark., gave way spreading the raging waters from the White River over approximately 600,000 acres of land in the White River Valley. Approximately 700 families were reported homeless, and four villages in the path of the constantly spreading waters were deserted.

Narrowly Escape

As in the case of the St. Francis River break, there were 300 men working on the levee when it went out. These men hastily threw aside their tools, and some were reported to have narrowly escaped with their lives.

Five companies of Missouri National Guardsmen are working desperately with 3,000 farmers, business and professional men south of Kennett in a frantic effort to prevent a break near Campbell, south of Kennett. It is believed the number of workers will be doubled by nightfall.

The Missouri River break is being watched more carefully than in the Arkansas River Valley, as there the rivers are not expected to reach another high crest. This was the second rise of the St. Francis River, and a third is expected to reach this section about Tuesday.

To Open Refugee Camp

Mayor E. Tankey of Kennett stated 150 families were in immediate need of attention in his city, and Red Cross headquarters have been established

COOLIDGE SPENDS FIRST DAY FISHING

Rain Gives President Excuse To Defer Initial Visit to Office

Superior, Wis., June 16—A smiling sun at Cedar Lodge versus a steady rain in Superior gave President Coolidge a valid excuse today to defer his initial visit to the temporary executive offices and devote himself to a Saturday of fishing.

He was up early completing yesterday's cursory survey of the elaborate Brule River Camp, and when word was phoned in that Superior was apparently in for a day of solid rain, the fishing decision was quickly made. The fact that the city and Cedar Island Lodge are separated by the divide he counted on to keep the rain away from his end of the summer establishment.

Col. E. W. Starling, assistant chief of the White House secret service, who has been in the north woods for the past two weeks acclimating himself and making arrangements for the presidential advent, accompanied Mr. Coolidge on the fishing expedition.

Nobile Rescue Steamer is Ice-bound in Spitzbergen; Relief Boat Also Hemmed In

Italian Explorer and His Party Now Drifting Westward; Arrival of Aviator Awaited at King's Bay; No Confirmation of Trio's Rescue

London, June 16—The steamer Braganza, which is attempting to bring aid to Gen. Umberto Nobile and his stranded crew, radioed that it was ice-bound near Brandy Bay, Spitzbergen, a Central News dispatch from King's Bay stated today.

The Braganza's operator stated that the relief steamer, Hobby was also hemmed in by the ice-floes between Walen Bay and Lommen Bay. Both teams which have been dispatched from both vessels are expected to meet at Cape Platen tonight.

A wireless message from Nobile received at King's Bay stated that his party was now drifting slowly westward, the dispatch added. It is now believed that Nobile is nearing Charles the Twelfth Land.

Await Pilot's Arrival

The arrival of Major Maddalena, the Italian aviator, is being eagerly awaited at King's Bay. This place has a wide cruising range and as the approximate position of the Italia's crew is now known, it is believed he will have no trouble in locating them.

He will attempt to land at the spot and take aboard the injured members of the crew and as many others as possible. If he finds it impossible to make a landing he will, at least, be able to drop medicines and other supplies.

No Confirmation

The powerful Russian ice-breaker Maligin is now steaming directly towards Foyne Island. When it arrives there, the seaplane aboard the ship will attempt to locate the stranded men and either make a landing or drop supplies.

There is still no confirmation of the report that the Swedish professor, Malmgren and the Italian navy commanders, Zappi and Mariano, who left the others of the Italia's crew to trek across the ice for aid, have been saved by a dog-team sent out by the Hobby.

The Russian ice-breaker Krassin is now also steaming northward to the aid of the Italia's crew.

GERMAN, ANYHOW

Press of Berlin Points Out Ancestry of Candidates

BERLIN, June 16—The next president of the United States will be a German, according to the claims of various members of the German press.

Whether the Republicans succeed in electing Herbert Hoover or the Democrats sweep in Gov. Al Smith, the result will be the same, these papers claim. The president will be a German.

Smith, they say, is the son of a German immigrant. His mother, they condescend to admit, was Irish.

Hoover's ancestors, they aver, were named Huber. The Hubers emigrated from Baden in 1709.

Masonic Temple Co. Gets Real Estate; Plan Erection of Building

A compromise involving a settlement of $60,000 in favor of relatives of the late Burr Raichley has been reached between the relatives who attempted to set aside Raichley's will, and the major beneficiaries of the estate, according to attorneys for the latter.

Decision to compromise was reached last Tuesday during the trial in the Common Pleas Court of Wyandot County in which relatives attempted to prove that the will left by Raichley was not his valid last will and testament. Terms of the settlement were announced today.

The terms of the settlement involve approximately one-half of the money left by Raichley. Besides this, there is real estate valued at $65,500 which is not included in the settlement. This will go to the Marion Masonic Temple Co. and will be used for the purposes directed in the will which provide that the ground is to be the site for a new Masonic Temple containing a memorial to the Raichley family.

Ends Suddenly

The case in the Wyandot County court came to a sudden close last Tuesday when the jury held the will to be valid after it was announced that a compromise had been reached during a conference of opposing attorneys.

According to the terms of the settlement, the bequests to relatives who were involved in the attempt to break the will are to be included in the $60,000. All other bequests, including those to the Marion Masonic Temple Co., the Piedmont Women's Club, and a number of friends of Raichley will all be reduced in the same proportion.

Another feature of the settlement provides that the relatives shall give the Masonic Temple Co. a clear deed for the real estate. This arrangement, it is said by attorneys, would enable the fraternal organization to use the property for other purposes than as the site for a new temple, should such action be necessary. Masonic leaders stated today however, that the request made by Raichley that the ground be the site for a new temple would be carried out.

One Hundred Thousand Unemployed Workers Stage Moscow Demonstration

Warsaw, June 16—One hundred thousand unemployed workers staged a huge demonstration in Moscow during which they clashed with the police and 30 persons were killed and 127 wounded, dispatches from unofficial sources in the Soviet capital stated today.

The clashes occurred when government soldiers attempted to disperse the demonstrators. The latter put up stubborn opposition and attempted to overcome the soldiers.

In the melee, many were trampled upon by the horses of the soldiers. Twelve of those who were killed were soldiers.

"The Miracle" to Star

NEWS OF MOVIES IN CINEMA CAPITAL

Some "Unkown" Girl

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Star Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, June 15—Some lucky unknown, now hiding her fame under a light, is about to be dragged into the glare of world-wide publicity. Richard Rowland is determined that only an actress who has not yet appeared in pictures shall play the role in "The Miracle" made famous on the stage by Lady Diana Manners and other well known actresses.

Apropos of "The Miracle," it might be well to explain the storm clouds that have surrounded this Max Reinhardt play since Dick Rowland determined to make a movie of it have been cleared away. Several conferences this last week indicate that the title will be clear this week and by September "The Miracle" will be well on its way.

Apparently Mr. Rowland and his conferres believe in Alexander Korda, the Hungarian Director, for he is slated to direct "The Miracle" and most of First National's other big pictures.

LUPE VALEZ may not know it, but she is going to receive an offer from First National very shortly. The same Richard Rowland of whom I wrote concerning "The Miracle" sees in Lupe the perfect type for the Gypsy Girl in "The Squall."

Lupe can take the ukelele and sing and do all the stunts that gave her such a big hand at the United Artists Theater in Los Angeles. As I write this, Joseph Schenck, is in Kansas City helping to nominate a Republican candidate for President. When he comes back to this fair city he will be asked by Richard Rowland to lend Lupe to First National.

Milton Sills is already slated for the father, Alice Joyce for the mother and Alexander Korda as the director. That is all I know except that "The Squall" will be made with Firmatone.

FILMLAND'S newest Napoleon, Joseph Kennedy, held a seance with Adolphe Menjou and Monta Bell yesterday. The blonde Boston banker, who is threatened with controlling an appalling number of film companies isn't hobnobbing socially the days with anyone. He is too busy.

That is why some of us who are suspicious by nature are responsible for contracts were discussed with Mr. Menjou and Mr. Bell. Monte is hovering around New York with an ear to the ground for offers to direct. Adolphe is just home from Europe and not loathe to listen to any reasonable offers. His new contract with Famous Players-Lasky is only for a year. Kennedy is nabbing all stock prospects and it would not surprise me if Menjou signed with him.

Marion, Miss Goudal knows, would be considerate and thoughtful and it would be less difficult to concede the spotlight to her than to some star who would exercise her prima donna privilege of being temperamental. Marion, fortunately never has learned to be temperamental.

The producers were chary of the Goudal reputation of being a prima donna. By playing a part supporting Marion Davies, she proved that she had ceased regarding herself as the great Goudal. Miss Goudal's luck seems to have changed, for now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has invited her to play the feminine lead opposite Jack Gilbert in "The Mask of Irwin Rasler," by Wasserman. Also, First National offered her a role in "The Squall," but she will make no decisions until she finished her "Her Cardboard Lover." Miss Goudal, I think, is one of the best actresses of her type on the screen.

WITH STAR STAFF

PREFERS $9.40

ACCUSTOMED to viewing life in all of its many shades of tragedy and pathos, employes at the Municipal Court were given a new and amusing angle of a domestic triangle several days ago, when a man, sad and depressed, came into the office of Clerk John Powell with the news that his wife had vamoosed with a boarder at his home.

Although accustomed to hearing tales of woe, the clerks were immediately very solicitous and anxiously inquired if they could not do something to help restore the missing wife to her sad eyed spouse. Their offers to help failed to bring any brightening response in the face of the victim, who finally confided that he was not interested so much in the recovery of his wife as he was in securing the $9.40 board bill that the boarder had failed to pay before departing with his wife.

CLOSED DOORS

YES, people read the newspapers, or at least no one admits that he doesn't. Certainly not all of them indulge in this three-cent pastime, or else the memories in Marion are rapidly shortening.

The paper advertises large-typed "four-hour" sales, the banks post notices, the stores having signs in all of the windows, announcing Wednesday afternoon closing, yet readers forget.

Every Wednesday afternoon wandering souls pull and tug at the doors of the downtown stores, creating a great deal of noise and attracting a great deal of attention. Then as their eyes travel to the lower edges of the glass and read the Wednesday closing sign, printed in such large black type, they turn quickly and walk sheepishly away.

Sometimes this situation calls forth a quick, "keen" ejaculation, and a stamp of the foot, while others try to appear nonchalant.

But it gets, them, just the same, to be caught doing something that they have been warned against so extensively.

FARM ORGANIZATION

ARE Marion County farmers out of step with agricultural interests in other sections of the state? There are some progressive rural residents who think so, and they are urgently advocating that steps be taken to remedy the situation.

Marion County, it is maintained, should have a farm agent. A representative of that official designation was on the job here up until a few years ago, when the position for some reason was abolished.

Indications that farming interests of the state are steadily growing more progressive and enterprising were provided at Columbus this week when the Ohio Farm Bureau Building was dedicated. A large number from this county attended and doubtless are now more convinced than ever that this community should take steps to have an executive head of their organizations appointed.

Marion County farmers are well organized, but it is maintained that the most effective work can not be accomplished without an agent on the job at all times, giving his full attention to promotion of agricultural welfare and interests.

STILL IN USE

THE Aronhalt show grounds on N. Prospect-st, scene of hundreds of tent shows of large and small dimensions for many years, continues to serve Marion as an entertainment center.

A repertoire company, portraying melodramas and comedies in old-time fashion, recently performed for a week at the Aronhalt lot, and other attractions are scheduled for the remainder of the summer.

The present show lot is considerably less than half its original size in the days when the "biggest on earth," spread their vast expanse of canvass over the grounds.

Years ago, before Oakent was extended north, the acreage went far to the west, taking in what is now the Silk Mills site.

Among the mammoth attractions which appeared there in those early days were Sells Brothers, Barnum & Bailey, and the John Robinson circuses. Buffalo Bill's great Wild West spectacle, and other shows of similar proportions.

With Buffalo Bill and his host of horsemen and marksmen from all parts of the world, appeared Annie Oakley, America's most renowned woman rifle shot.

UNKNOWN MAN ABANDONS CAR

Fire Destroys Machine Near A. A. Brollier Farm, Mt. Gilead

Mt. Gilead, June 16—Disappearing before he could be questioned the driver of an Auburn roadster abandoned the car and a quantity of Canadian liquor when the machine caught fire after running into the ditch near the A. A. Brollier farm, one half mile east of here shortly after 11 o'clock last night. A number of the bottles of liquor were broken and the car completely destroyed by fire.

Paul Brollier, son of A. A. Brollier arrived at the scene shortly after the machine ran into the ditch and learned from the driver that he was unhurt and that the car did not belong to him. Although the driver claimed to be alone, the finding of a fur scarf, vanity case and purse, lead authorities to believe a woman was in the car at the time of the accident.

Sheriff Leslie Pischer, who was summoned, got in touch with Columbus authorities and learned that the license had been issued to Clay Neal, 369 Columbus-av, Columbus, for an Overland touring car. Neal stated this morning that he had loaned his car to Charles Morris, also of Columbus, yesterday, but knew nothing about his plans. Neal planned to come to Mt. Gilead this afternoon. The car was taken in charge by a local garage.

Mt. Gilead, June 16—Camp Mitchell has been chosen by the Girl Scouts as the scene of summer camp activities. Those contemplating attending this year have already filed their intentions with Mrs. Kenneth McGeorge, local Girl Scout Leader.

Camp Mitchell was attended by the girls last year and found highly satisfactory. It is located three miles west of Columbus and ideally situated for nature study, creeks, etc. Miss Anna M. Hilderbrand lost control of his car and crashed into a tree, which resulted in an artery gash in his arm. The tramp loitering along the road rushed to the scene and bandaged the wound above the elbow, stopping the flow of blood. Bond of $8,000 Furnished by Father and Brother of Dale Lutz

Bucyrus, June 16—Self confessed Crawford County "fire bug," Dale Lutz, was released from the county jail yesterday when his bond of $8,000 was furnished by his father and brothers. After spending two months in the jail awaiting bond which was originally placed at $10,000 by Mayor Schuler, C. P. Abl, Lutz's attorney, made application for reduced bond.

Lutz confessed to J. D. Cleary, of a detective agency of Columbus, that he was responsible for at least one of the fires of the series of five barn fires throughout the county within the past few months.

Reports of investigations since the arrest of Lutz have been quiet until yesterday when Cleary grilled Mr. and Mrs. Howard Coulter regarding true facts about the fire. They were released when they failed to throw any light on the mystery. Previous to the grilling of Coulter and his wife, they were found to be telling conflicting stories about conditions of the morning of the fire, which destroyed the Coulter barn.

TYPES OF MODEL DWELLINGS

Homes of the better class, yet none beyond the reach of persons of moderate means, are being constructed by lot owners in Brightwood, one of Marion's choice residential sections. With an ideal natural setting provided in the subdivision and with improvements added to assure all modern conveniences, Brightwood is one of the most popular allotments ever placed on the market here.

24 REALTY CHANGES IN WEEK'S RECORD

Slightly Below Average for Year; Mortgages Reach High Total

With 24 property transfers, the week ending today ran about normal in Marion County so far as real estate transactions are concerned. The number of transfers this week is slightly below the average for the year. Last week there were 21.

While the amount of money loaned on mortgages on Marion County property almost doubled this week, the number of mortgages dropped from 28 to 19. Two mortgages of more than average size made up the bulk. One was for $50,000 and the other for $45,000.

The total amount of money loaned on mortgages this week was $121,677.50. Last week the total was $83,067.35.

The $50,000 mortgage was placed on the First Church of Christ Scientist, church building now under construction. It was placed by the People's Building, Savings & Loan Co. The other large mortgage was placed on real estate in the city by the Guarantee Title & Trust Co.

Only one mortgage of $1,800 was placed on property outside the limits of Marion. While mortgages on county property have been showing a decrease during the last few weeks the figure this week is the lowest to be recorded this year.

Of the total amount of money loaned on mortgages, $70,317.50 was placed by building and loan companies. The remainder, with the exception of $360, was placed by banks.

BUILDING SHOWS INCREASE IN MAY

Construction Work on Upgrade Throughout Country, Is Report

Washington, June 16 — Construction operations increased in volume during May, according to statistics just compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America. The rise last month, however, was not sufficiently great to bring the May total up to the mark recorded for the corresponding month one year ago, when a new record for that period of the year was set. The statistics are based upon actual shipments of basic construction materials.

The total amount of construction work of all types handled during the first five months of this year is less than the volume recorded for the first five months of 1927, the figures indicate. The present total is so close to the figure established during the record-breaking months of last year, however, that no significance is attached to the latest development.

Indication that the slight deficiency will be wiped out during the mid-summer months is found in the large volume of contracts awarded for future work. The volume of contracts awarded during April was the greatest ever registered for a single month, exceeding the March total by 8.5 per cent. The total volume of contracts awarded during the first four months of 1928 is more than eight per cent greater than the corresponding figure for 1927.

A scale which places the 1913 average at 100 as its basis, shows the index number representative of construction work actually under way during May to be 185. Index numbers for other months of the current year are: January, 125; February, 124; March, 137, and April, 164. Figures covering the corresponding months of 1927 are: January, 120; February, 121; March, 135; April, 166, and May, 197.

MILLIONS RECOVERED FOR REALTY BUYERS

License Laws Yield Big Benefits for Victims of Dishonest Dealers

Over $3,261,910.32 has been refunded to victims of unscrupulous real estate agents through the operation of the real estate license laws in the 12 states which have kept records of such refunds since the laws went into effect, according to a compilation made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards from reports of officials administering the license laws.

To the figure in question must be added several hundred thousands of dollars returned to victimized clients through the activities of real estate commissions in the 10 states which have kept no statistical records.

Over 10,147 complaints have been investigated and adjusted by the commissions administering real estate license laws, the reports further show.

A total of $529,930.89 was refunded during 1927 alone in the 11 states where commissions kept record of such refunds. Complaints to the number of 2,234 were adjusted during the year by the 18 real estate commissions which kept such a numerical record.

In the 21 states in which real estate license laws were in operation in 1927, a total of 113,241 real estate brokers' licenses and a total of 116,627 real estate salesmen's licenses were issued.

Licenses were denied to 1,666 applicants on the ground that they were either not of good reputation, or not competent to transact a real estate broker's business. A total of 68 real estate licenses were suspended, and a total of 83 were revoked during the year.

In British Columbia, the only Canadian province having a real estate license law, 628 brokers' licenses were issued and 339 salesmen's licenses were issued. Twenty-two licenses were revoked.

Commissioners in a number of states have been active in suppressing the sale of lots by what is known as the "free lot scheme." Real estate commissions in Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and California have taken the stand that operation of such a scheme of sales is sufficient ground for revocation of license.

ADDITION HAS RAPID GROWTH

Model Residence Area Developed Within Period of Two Years

Brightwood only two years ago was considered a good piece of farm land. Hardly any one had dreamed that it was soon to be developed into one of Marion's finest locations for home-builders, but Marion residents of foresight were quick to seize the opportunity that this accessible allotment held for them.

Brightwood is located south on Mt. Vernon-av, just a block or two from the Harding Memorial Home. Its boundaries are Mt. Vernon-av on the north, Brightwood-dr on the east, Vernon Heights-blvd on the south and Durfee-dr on the west. This beautiful subdivision is comprised of many acres of high, good land, divided at present into approximately 65 large and roomy lots. You will find it not over 10 minutes walk from the courthouse, which makes it particularly handy for people who want to walk when they do their shopping.

A year ago only one home was actually completed in Brightwood, today there are about a half dozen lovely homes which are completed and occupied, with approximately twice as many homes planned for the next year, many of which will be started this summer.

The Baldauf family, John, Charlie, Owen, Harry and Andrew all have purchased property in Brightwood where they are making plans for their own individual homes, work on which should start some time this summer.

Some of the other homes planned for the near future are C. A. Russel's on Brightwood-dr, Scott Irey's on Durfee-dr, and M. A. Mickley's on Brightwood-dr. A. J. Houghton's fine brick home is nearing completion on Lafayette-st, as is Albert Harruff's on Brightwood-dr.

Thoroughly Improved

Brightwood can boast of all its improvements being in with the exception of paved streets. The streets are hard-surfaced at present. With gas, electricity, water, sewers, and sidewalks in, the home owners will not be inconvenienced until streets can be laid. In fact very extensive paving plans have been laid for the near future.

Recently the southern entrance to Brightwood, which is located almost opposite from the Harding Memorial, has been connected up with Vernon Heights-blvd on the south, giving the people of Brightwood a splendid entrance on the south. In other words, Brightwood is located between the two finest boulevards in the city, which means great appreciation in property values when it becomes fully developed.

Included in Brightwood is the famous Indian Mound, lying almost in its center, about which there are many tales of Indian lore.

It is seldom that the people of any modern city can live so close in and still have the advantages of a suburban homesite as we find in Brightwood. One of the chief reasons for the excellent response given by the public to the appeal of Brightwood Addition is the fact that this tract is located in the best residence section of Marion and combines all the advantages of the city with the trees, flowers and sunshine which are usually to be found only in a suburban home. Credit for the development of this addition must be given to Miss Genevieve Hummer and Hayes Thompson, who have acted as the officials of the Landscape Architecture Co. and have directed all the plans for Brightwood Addition.

Isaly 9, Kiwanis 0 (forfeit).

With the Eagles baseball squad holding tightly to first place by annexing another victory, the four-cornered tie for second place in the Commercial league was cut down to two teams as a result of the games last night.

In the featured contest, Shovel A. A. split sent the Kappas into a three-way tie for third place with Erie Clerks and Yardmen, by overcoming the fraternity squad with a score of 6 to 3. K. of P. also succeeded in remaining in the second place running by shutting out the Erie Clerks' club which until last night was also a member of the four-way tie.

Erie Yardmen took the measure of the Marion Stars, 6 to 3 in the other game of the league last night. The scheduled contest between Isaly and Kiwanis was forfeited by the latter team.

Down Baptists

The Eagles had no trouble in downing the Baptists 18 to 2 and enforcing their hold on the top of the ladder. The Eagle squad made every one of their runs count for a run during the game. The Eagle pitcher, garnered three of the singles, as did Andrew, Young and Beyer, while Bacon managed to pop out two safeties. The Baptists were held to six hits, two of them being accredited for by Smith, who covered the second sack.

Clark tossed a brilliant game for the Shovelers and permitted the Kappa batters but four safe clouts. The six Shovel runs came in the second and third frames. The team collected nine hits. Rank twirled for the losers.

Run Makers

Scot and Peadon were run makers for the Knights of Pythias aggregation. Both scored in the fifth inning as a result of hits cracked out by them and other members of the team. Peadon did the mound work for the winning team while Jones tossed for the Erie Clerks. Both the Marion Star and Erie Yardmen nines banged out eights hits during the game. Five hits made in the first two frames of the contest only netted the newspapermen one run while four hits in the same innings gave the Erie squad three scores.

Cranky folks are sincere in this: They do not try to hide their bad temper. But that makes them no more likable.

RUTH WALLOPS ANOTHER DRIVE

New York, June 16—George Herman Ruth's 24th homer of the season, made yesterday off Crowder of the St. Louis Browns, puts him seven games ahead of his last year's record. He is nine up on Buster Gehrig, his closest contender.

Jim Bottomley confributed his thirteenth circuit clout of the campaign, going into a tie with Rogers Hornsby for home run hitting laurels in the National League.

CANADIAN PACER MAY APPEAR IN MARION

Grattan Bars Expected To Race on Short Ship Harness Program

Grattan Bars, famous pacer from Kerwood ,Ontario, Canada, has been slated to appear in the Ohio Short Ship meeting in Marion, July 30 to August 3, according to an announcement made by Frank Foster, secretary of the Marion Racing Association, today.

The Canadian horse, which has been nicknamed "The Canadian Flyer," appeared for the first time in the United States at the Sandusky meeting of the association, Thursday. The pacer easily won the 2:08 pace on the Thursday card, stepping the last half mile of the first heat in 1:01¼.

The opinion that Grattan Bars is a coming champion has been offered by several harness race followers who have witnessed a performance of the Canadian product.

Marion racing fans will likely be treated to some of the best harness contests that the local dirt track has ever known, owing principally to the fact that many first class horses are expected to race here. Due to a break in the schedule of the Grand Circuit which occurs on the date of the Marion Short Ship meeting, many of the horses of that loop will be seen in action here.

Definite plans for the racing card in Marion's Short Ship Harness session will not be definitely known until shortly before the races are scheduled. The program of events will be drawn up in collaboration with Mansfield officials who will be hosts to the meet the week preceding the Marion races. Mansfield will have two sessions of the circuit this season, the first one taking place next week.

FINAL TRYOUTS FOR U. S. OLYMPIC SQUAD BEING HELD TODAY

America's Hopes for Honors at Amsterdam This Summer To Be Selected

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

New York, June 16—The question of just how much of a splurge your favorite uncle, with the striped pants, high hat, chin whiskers and the name of Samuel, may be prepared to make in the olympic games at Amsterdam this summer will be presented for a show down in three major sectors of the country this afternoon. New York will muster the flower of eastern competition at the Yankee Stadium; Denver will call forth the best of the Rocky Mountain District and Los Angeles, ever the happy hunting ground for talent on the spiked hoof, will send to the post one of the finest groups of sprinters, jumpers, hurdlers and whatwould-you ever assembled on one field.

The occasions in question will be sectional Olympic trials, preliminary to the final and ultimate qualification for team places in Boston early in July. Winners and second men in the Eastern Intercollegiates and the National Collegiate A. A. games already have staked their claims to a fling at the Boston finale. So have the qualifiers in the Pacific trials at San Francisco the Pacific northwest test at Portland, Ore., the southern affair at Dallas and the southeastern sectionals at Atlanta.

Paddock in Race

Is Charley Paddock still the "fastest human?" He very nearly will have to be to outfoot the field they are dropping him with on the coast this afternoon. The day Charles was said to have 9½ seconds for the hundred, there was some question of whether he hadn't actually been headed at the tape by another man. Th latter was and still is Charley Borah and he will be in there against Paddock again this afternoon. So will be Lombardi, the 9 3-5 second schoolboy, and Wyckoff, another precocious juvenile. It may be specifically determined this afternoon whether or not Paddock is to exercise his usual domination of the Olympic sprints this year.

The Yankee Stadium field of sprinters will be equally meritorious in quality and considerably greater in quantity. The good ones will include Jack Scholz, Olympic champion; Frank Hussey, and Chet Bowman, members of the 1924 team; Hank Russell, back to form again; Roland Locke, the ex-cornhusker whose injuries have prevented him from resuming his record breaking career of several years ago, and a coterie of collegians.

Those games also will show Lloyd Hahn under colors for the first time since he entered a new world's half mile record in the books last March. Hahn has declared for the 800-metre distance and his performance will be watched jealously by the American coaches, who are figuring on the Nebraskan to break up the Nurmi monopoly on the Olympic middle distance races. Those same coaches will be watching Weems Baskin in the high hurdles and John Gibson over the 400-metre obstacles, as this is another pair that is regarded as potential winners in its specialties at Amsterdam.

PACER BOOKED

For 18 Big Stake Races in Seven States

Kenton, June 16—Joe Lewis, speedy pacer from the stable of Ora Jump, prominent Kenton racehorse man, has been booked in 18 big stake races in at least seven states this season, according to the owner.

The horse now in training on a Columbus track, is showing good and promises to cop a nice share of the rich stakes ranging from $25,000 to $1,000 if everything goes well.

FOUR BOUTS ON CARD OF EAGLES' SHOW AT CRYSTAL LAKE PARK

Program for June 25 Totals 28 Rounds: Local Youths To Fight

Four bouts with a total card of 28 rounds will be offered at the next Eagles boxing show to be given at Crystal Lake Park, June 25, according to an announcement of Paul Castner, promoter, today.

Martin Massie, of Cleveland, will clash with Lou Janita, of Columbus, at 126 pounds in the main go of the Eagles show. The bout limit will be eight rounds.

Ray Snyder, of Marion, will be pitted against Al Hines, of Columbus, at 145 pounds in the semi-final feature. The semi-final match will also be an eight-round bout.

Williams To Fight

Two six-round matches between Wildcat Auskings, of Mt. Vernon, and Mike Kelley, of Cleveland, and Kid Simpkins, of Mt. Vernon, and Harold Williams, of Marion, will make up the rest of the 28-round card.

Auskings and Kelley will battle at 135 pounds and the last round will be at 128 pounds. The latter part of May, Auskings scored a knockout over Bennie Welsh, of Columbus, in a program presented at Mt. Vernon. Simpkins won a decision over his opponent at the same tight.

Good Record

Before entering the professional ranks, Massie boxed under the name of Young Johnny Risko. As an amateur the Cleveland youth won the city and state championships in the bantam class.

Lou Janita, his opponent in the main bout here, is regarded as one of the best boxers in this section of the country, holding decisions over Midget Mike Ofstead and Harry Forbes. Janita, who is 22 years of age, was former sparring partner for Lou Bloom.

Al Hines, Snyder's opponent, has had 18 battles and has yet to lose a decision.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York: Dave Shade, California middleweight, won decision over George Courtney, of Oklahoma, (10).

Harold Maze, Bayonne, N. J. heavyweight, outpointed Benny Touchstone, of Florida, (8).

At Harkensack, N. J.: Joe Schlicher, coast welterweight, outpointed Joe Moreno, Orange, N. J., (8).

Conversion may not make a heathen happy, but the heathen is far from that with the benighted beliefs he already has.

SHADE WINS

Decision Over George Courtney in Real Grudge Fight

New York, June 16—One of those rare ring occurrences, a real grudge fight, wound up with a foggy decision last night at the Coney Island Stadium, when Dave Shade was declared a winner over George Courtney at the end of ten rounds of mean milling.

This pair, ranked among the leading middleweights, had never met before this and, with the possibility of a little bout with Mickey Walker looming up for the winner, plus personal dislike of each other, they came down to the wire fighting savagely.

CARDINALS DISLODGE REDS FROM LEAD

Face Strong Opposition from Third Place New York Giants

New York, June 16—The St. Louis Cardinals, who have dislodged the Reds from the top rung of the National League ladder after a long stern chase, face stronger opposition today from the third place New York Giants.

In a characteristic last-minute trade a few hours before the twenty-five player limit went into effect last night, Manager John McGraw obtained the veteran pitcher he needed to round out his mound staff. He swapped Catcher Al Spohrer and three twirlers—the veteran, Virgil Barnes and two rookies, Ben Cantwell and Bill Clarkson—to the Boston Braves in exchange for Joe Genewich.

The Cardinals eased into first place when Sunny Jim Bottomley's homer with two on base in the fourteenth stalked them to a 5 to 2 win over Brooklyn.

Reds Lose

The tail-end Phillies took an 8 to 7 six-gifest from the Reds.

Vic Aldridge, former Pirate, made a home run and two singles in addition to pitching the Giants to a 9 to 1 victory over the Bees.

The Braves can certainly use those pitchers they are getting from the Giants. The Bees-waters dropped their seventh straight game when the Cubs nosed them out, 5 to 4. Hack Wilson swatted his twelfth homer.

The Tigers lost out to Washington in the tenth, 5 to 4.

With Lefty Grove on the mound, the Athletics swamped Cleveland, 12 to 5, and gained a full .3 on the Yankees.

Brannon and Kress, the Tulsa twins, personally conducted the sprightly St. Louis Browns to a 5 to 4 win over the Yanks.

Danny MacFayden, lengthy-tuckered Red Sox twirler, held the White Sox hitless for seven innings and trimmed them 3 to 1.

NOTED COLORED NINE TO APPEAR SUNDAY AT LINCOLN PARK

Visitors' Lineup Includes Some Players Who Defeated Locals Last Year

Probably the toughest opposition of the year will meet the Marion Eagles baseball team when they battle the Homestead Grays, famous colored aggregation of Homestead, Pa., at Lincoln Park, Sunday afternoon.

One of the few losses given the local nine by a visiting team last year, was performed by the Homesteaders, who will return to the Lincoln diamonds Sunday with practically the same team. Fans who attended the contest last season will remember the situation which resulted in one of the severest losses ever administered to a Marion team. With Marion leading until the final minutes of the game, the Grays came to bat in the last inning and poled out a collection of hits, including three home runs, which placed them far in the lead.

"Smoky" Joe With Team

"Smoky" Joe Williams, 39-year-old pitcher, who tossed one inning in the game last year is with the Homestead team again this season and is likely to start on the mound for Sunday's contest. Oscar Owens, who started the moundwork last year, may get the call to oppose the Marionites.

The Grays lineup will include probably the best colored talent in the country. John Beckwith, who is said to hit the ball harder than Rogers Hornsby and has been termed the "Colored Babe Ruth" will be seen in the shortstop berth. In 48 games this year, Beckwith has hit 24 home runs, his greatest home run hitting occurring Saturday, June 2, when he made five circuit clouts in a double header at Uniontown, Pa. Three of the blows came in successive appearances at the plate.

Probable Lineup

The record of the Homestead Grays up until last Sunday was 48 victories and four defeats in 52 games. Last year four of the 138 victories lined up during the season were made over a team composed of American League All-Stars, whom the Grays met after the big league season was concluded.

Following is the probable lineup of the Grays for Sunday:

Old Story of Over-Inflated Prices Built of Public Gullibility Retold

New York, June 16—Selling pressure on the industrial market leaders was promptly resumed in the short session of the stock market today and prices continued the downward movement which was in progress at Friday's close. This "secondary reaction" following Tuesday's drastic decline was not unexpected, and its effect will be to place a more reasonable and sensible relation between corporation earnings and stock prices.

BY W. B. COUSINS

Financial Editor

New York, June 16—The stock market bent and broke this week under the load of frenzied liquidation of industrial stocks, and not even the stirring sessions of the Republican national convention were sufficient to divert attention from the speculative markets.

In the first 5,000,000-share session in history, and with the ticker tape nearly two hours behind the market at the close of the day, the stock market on Tuesday was compelled to absorb and digest the weekly-margined accumulations of thousands of small traders all over the country—with the usual result. Prices broke wildly, the speculative favorites were subjected to vicious short selling, and once again the Wall Street lambs were shorn of their fleeces, in many cases losing the accumulated "paper profits" of the last six months or more.

It required no charts, curves, indexes, cycle theories or economic diagnoses to account for the sudden shifting of the speculative sands. It was the old story of over-inflated prices built up on public gullibility, with definite assurance that the laws of supply and demand had been suspended for the time being. Powerful pools controlled the market movement of the hair favorite stocks, and when the time for "rushing in" arrived there were few bidders at the higher prices.

A $138,000,000 shrinkage in brokers' loans, reported at the close of Thursday's market, was emphatic testimony to the extent of the shake out of weakly-margined stock accounts; but, even before the publication of the Reserve Board's weekly money report, the market had inaugurated the inevitable rally which, sooner or later, follows in the wake of severe decline in prices.

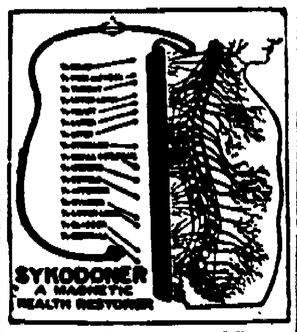
Now Smiles Instead of Tears!

Sykodoner Results So Amazing As To Be Almost Beyond Belief.

The results now being obtained through the use of this marvelous new invention—the famous Sykodoner System, is startling the entire scientific world. Unsolicited testimonials are pouring in on us, telling of results so amazing as to be almost beyond belief.



This is again most beautifully presented, in the case of a Mrs. Miller, Gill Ave., Marion, Ohio. The results obtained, after but a few days, are so astonishingly remarkable, as to almost impose upon your credulity. Yet it is only too true. Mrs. Miller had been an invalid for about five years, her long suffering, life wasting away, suffering with pain, worry, and above all, discouragement. A sorrowful picture, indeed. She had to be lifted in and out of bed, for years and years—practically helpless. One kind of treatment after another was tried. They all failed. Would that not make anyone lose all hope of ever seeing a well day again, and enjoy the beauties of Nature? Most assuredly so! Now comes the pleasant part of this story—a story so wonderfully true, that one is almost compelled to pinch self, to make sure it is not all a dream. In less than one week's use of the SYKODONER—the wonder of the age—Mrs. Miller was on her feet again, doing ironing, and other house work. Yet the day the first treatment was applied—in the comforts of her own home, Mrs. Miller had not stood on her feet for many years. Now what do you think of that? Can you even imagine anything like it? No, this is not an isolated case; we can show you many other cases, right here in the city of Marion and vicinity, that are far more wonderful than the above, brought about thru the exclusive use of the famous Sykodoner, which reaches almost every disease known to medical science, regardless what it is called, or what you may have tried and failed. At least, it costs you nothing to find out. Phone 2760, for appointment here in our office, or in the comforts of your own home, and witness the most amazing phenomena of all your life—all without the use of drugs, serum, surgery, or even faith or rubbing. It is the one and only treatment that really gets results—if used consistently—either while sleeping or awake. None other will do this. You need not even remove a garment. It costs nothing to convince yourself of this. Rich and poor—none turned away. You cannot afford to miss it. Be sure to see the Sykodoner Man, in his little cottage home—543 N. Greenwood St., Marion, Ohio, today. It may be a day long and pleasantly remembered, as a time well spent. For without health, what have you? Nothing! Why delay longer?

Do a kind act by sending this to an afflicted friend. Hours 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Also evenings and Sunday forenoons.—Adv.

Arrival of Home Berries Is Week's Market Feature

A great rush on the market of home grown berries, with a spectacular drop in the price of watermelons from about $1.00 to from 65 to 85 cents, provided special features on the local market this week. Predictions by dealers that no grown berries would be on the market by June 14 proved true and today found dealers carrying a large supply of berries from the farms of local growers. Prediction that the price would be higher than that asked for shipped-in varieties also proved true and the home berries sold readily at 25 cents, seven cents higher than for shipped-in stock

The supply was limited and late Thursday afternoon was exhausted. Fresh supplies were on the market Friday but the cool weather has held back ripening and the supply has not been sufficient to meet the demand. Today found a break in the price when several dealers were offering home-grown stock at two quarts for 39 cents.

Watermelons, which have been in the luxury class since appearance on the market several weeks ago, took part in a spectacular drop today when large melons were being offered at 65 cents. Pineapples for canning have been plentiful all week, although the price has held at from $1.25 to $2.50 a dozen.

Vegetable prices also tumbled this week when peas, which have been selling at 20 cents, were offered at 15 cents or two pounds for 25 cents. Green and yellow wax beans, which have sold at 20 cents for the past several months, were being offered at 18 cents or two pounds for 35 cents Friday. New potatoes are also cheaper. Good quality stock which has been holding at five pounds for 25 cents were being offered at from 39 to 41 cents a peck today.

HEFLIN WILL HAVE POLICE PROTECTION

Alabama Senator Assured That He Will Speak Without Interference

Albany N. Y, June 16—Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, today had assurance that he would speak at Hurleyville, near here, next Sunday, without fear of interruption or interference. In fact he will have police protection.

The following order to Major John A. Warner, superintendent of state police, was issued by Governor Al Smith, whom Heflin has attacked verbally numerous times:

"Announcement has been made that Senator Heflin of Alabama is to speak in Albany County. It is our duty to take every reasonable measure to assure to him his constitutional right of free speech. I therefore direct you to see to it that he and his meetings are fully protected and that all who desire to hear him shall be enabled to do so without interference.

"I ask the people of New York to cooperate with the governor in offering to the senator of a sister state full opportunity to say anything that he desires without interruption or discourtesy."

Those classes are rapidly filling Ackerman Co. officials state and as there are no facilities for instruction of more than 100 pupils, 20 in a class, the enrollments will cease after this number has been reached. The pupil does not need a piano at home for practice in taking advantage of this training course, it was stated.

REAL HOOVER-SMITH FIGHT IN NEW YORK

Some of Party's Best Orators Will Campaign in Every Big City

Kansas City, June 16—The New York delegation was speeding home today from the Republican national convention with virtually this one thought in mind:

"Can Hoover carry New York if Al Smith is nominated by the Democrats?"

The original Hoover leaders in the New York delegation, such as Ogden L. Mills, under secretary of the treasury; Richard Lawrence, G. O. P. leader of the Bronx, and William H. Hill of Binghamton, who served as Hoover's up-state manager during the pre-convention activities, were in a happy frame of mind. They insisted that despite Governor Smith's popularity in his home state, the commerce secretary would come through with flying colors on election night.

There is another side to the picture, however. The leaders of the "Draft Coolidge" movement in delegation publicly are cheering for Hoover, but privately they are declaring that a real fight lies ahead of them in Smith's own state.

Convinced that New York is likely to be a pivotal state in the election this fall, the Hoover forces already are making tentative plans for one of the most intensive campaigns ever waged in the Empire State. Some of the party's best orators will campaign in every city of any size in the state in an effort to win the state for the national ticket.

Visits "Just Folks"

Will Rogers Gets Acquainted with Lighthouse Keepers of Prairie While Plane Is Being Repaired at Cherokee, Wyo.

By WILL ROGERS

"While the Pilot and Light Man are fixing the wheel I'm in the house drinking good coffee"

WELL, All I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I run into as I prowl the old Commonwealth. Here is something I bet you never run into and the most of you dident know existed, and that is "A Light House Keeper" in the middle of a prairie.

I sho love to meet "Folks." I Mean "Just folks" and talk with them and get their angle. Well the other night I had the chance. I was flying from Beverly Hills back to Chicago to go to the late lamented Republican upheaval and after having one little mishap at Las Vegas, Nevada, where our Plane turned over in landing, and not a one of the three of us got a scratch, and incidentally it was the very first accident of any kind I had ever been in, in all the flying I have done. Well they sent up another Plane from Los Angeles and I only lost a couple of hours and then right on into Salt Lake, and then out of there on the next leg of the journey.

Meets Lighthouse Keeper

Was on the regular mail plane. They generally stop for gas at Rock Springs, Wyoming, but the wind was bad and its not any good a field so we went on to an emergency landing field at Cherokee, Wyoming. We got our gas and in taking off the wheel hit a big Gopher hole and sprung the strut, or brace, that holds the undercarriage. We were going very slow at the time, and nothing happened, only that we couldn't take off with that in that shape, so he phoned into Cheyenne, and they sent out another Plane and in a couple of hours there it was. Yet Cheyenne was 175 miles away.

Well while we was waiting out there on the prairie, it was just beginning to get dark, then is where I made my acquaintance with my first "Light House Keeper." A real honest to goodness Light House Keeper, that works for Uncle Sam and is there day and night, 365 days just to keep the light burning to save wayfarers on their way, the same as if he was out on a lonely island off the rock bound coast of somewhere or other.

Here he is out on this big open prairie, a man and his wife. They have a little box house, split up into three rooms, and out a few steps away is the Tower House. There is a Tower with the big revolving light on it. It has an electric motor in the power house that runs it and all the lights that are around the field. The little tower house is about 10 feet square.

These Light Houses are strung clear across our continent to guide the Air Mail Pilots at night, they are about twenty-five miles apart. Then in between, just about every three miles, are the small flicker lights. They are run from the rays of the sun and go on when the sun goes down. No one has to tend them.

Well here is this fellow and his wife. When night comes on he goes out around his field and turns on the lights that show the outline of the landing field, then the big tower light. Well while the pilot and the light man are out trying to fix the wheel I am in the house drinking good coffee, and talking to the Light House Keeper's wife. It gets 35 below zero out there in the winter. They are twenty-five miles away from Rawlings the nearest town and Post Office. Their only means of seeing anyone is an emergency landing by some Pilot in a storm. They are paid by the Department of Commerce, the salary is around $100 a month, with house rent, and fuel furnished. They have two boys away at Laramie, at the University, specializing in electricity. They have been in this service ever since it was started in 1921. She thinks the youngest boy will become a Pilot.

She visited her mother whom she hadent seen in years and lives out in California. The Boehling line that operates the mail service gave her a pass, and she got on a plane in her front your land and made the trip out to California by Plane, and then back by plane and landed right at her own doorstoop. She says that was the most wonderful trip, and by golly it was. How many of you people that had all our so called advantages, have ever had an experience like that? She spoke about how nice all the different Pilots were to her on the trip, she said, "They couldent have treated me finer if I had been a Millionaire making the trip." She talked about all the different air ports, and the big mountains that she flew over, she turns on the lights when her husband is sick, they have a nice new little Chevrolet car and one of the best looking cooking stoves I ever saw, a great big dandy white enameled thing, that burns either coal or oil, and what a pride she took in it when she saw I was interested in it. She told me what it cost and how they was able to afford it, just think of it in these days and times, a woman that takes pride in her cooking stove. She was a mighty fine wholesome middle aged woman, wasent interested much in a permanent wave, or reducing, but did bake some of the best bread I had had in years. Said that the people who landed there as passengers in storms sometimes, were all mighty fine, and put up good naturedly with the conditions that they had to meet.

Great People

She knew all the Pilots on that run, knew all about them their joys and sorrows. She said they was all "Such fine boys." Her husband come from Iowa, and she come from Oklahoma, and they argued all the time over which was the best State. I settled that for em. Her boys will be home in a couple of weeks and how she beamed! I imagine they are working their way through school, and I bet they both turn out great. She said her and her husband 'ndent had much "Schooling" but they wanted to have their boys have a chance. Says the boys and her run a little filling station out on the highway in the summer time and that pays em pretty well, and then they handle the gas for the emergency landings, and they get paid extra for that by the mail company.

She was a cheerful soul and she had a right to be, I don't know but after it was over and our Plane had come and we had loaded in the mail and were away with only a couple of hours delay, I was kinder glad it had happened.

It made you appreciate some "Real Folks." I dont know when I enjoyed two hours more. We got some great people in this country, and they aint all on Wall Street, or at the Luncheon Clubs, or in the Movies or in the Senate. Some of em are just in the "Light Houses" on the Prairies.

-o- The New Book -o-

By FRANCES JENNINGS

It is of a would-be minister and a budding star of the English musical comedy stage that Coningsby Dawson has chosen to write in "Pilgrims of the Impossible", his new book recently released from the presses of Doubleday Doran.

Those who have read and enjoyed Mr. Dawson's earlier novels, "When Is Always?", "Old Youth" and the like will view with amazement this new book in which character portrayal, conversational bits and background far excels anything that author yet has done.

The story concerns itself with conflicting ideals—those of a woman who sacrificed her love because she could not afford to hurt a worthless husband and of her lover, who sacrificed her to the other man because he could not ask her to forego her stage career to share his life of poverty. His struggle for success had only begun.

The no-account husband redeems himself in the end with an act of courage which causes the hero to proclaim him, if only for a brief second, "the bravest man in France" and, for eternity, for his one act of loyalty meant his death, "a true pilgrim of the impossible."

The relationship of the three characters is decidedly unusual. Despite the fact that his best friend has married his fiancee the three remain faithful to each other, understanding, true, and are rewarded for their loyalty when the situation rights itself in the ending of the book.

MARGARET WILSON'S "DAUGHTERS OF INDIA"

MARGARET WILSON, who won the Harper prize for 1923 with "The Able McLaughlins" went to India for the setting of her new novel, "The Daughters of India", which is the character portrayal of Davida, a most human and lovable woman missionary from Missouri.

We first see Davida, who is known as "Miss Sahib", living in the smallest of Indian towns and dallying with her lessons in Persian. It develops that Davida has luxurious tastes which she is trying to curb by austere self-discipline. "Why, one never knows, unless she considered such discipline becoming in a missionary. Although she succeeds in making herself dearly beloved by all including the readers of "The Daughters of India" she never develops any austerity of manner, nor loses her sense of humor, wit, keenness for situations, love of adventure, quick sympathy and understanding.

Miss Wilson's book depicts the habits and conditions of life in that particular part of India very clearly, but it lacks the challenge of the imagination it seems always just about to promise. The plot is weak and the ending, so far as the plot itself is concerned, is flat, but the word pictures of India are vivid and real and the character drawings superb. —B. T.

HERE'S BOOK FOR YOUR VACATION

ON the boat—on the train—when it's too hot to play golf—too cold to swim—one's thoughts turn to a book. For the vacationer's spare moments Doubleday, Doran have just published their second annual "Week-End Library," a fat gay volume which they has just been selected as the Dutton Book-of-the-Month for June. Premier Mussolini's dictatorship in Italy, admittedly one of the strongest nationalistic achievements of the modern day, followed a period of political graft and corruption that will take rank among the blackest on the pages of world political history, according to Pirandello's revelations in the new book.

Publication of the volume in the United States is particularly interesting at this time when young men and old, and comparatively new women voters, are deeply interested in politics. Graft and corruption, many American voters will have brought home for them for the first time, are not peculiar alone to the U. S., but, on the contrary, are far less inbred into the national political structure of this country than they were in pre-war Italy.

Do you know that—only 3 men out of every 100 ever succeed in accumulating as much as $5,000?

Think of it—in America, the richest country in the world, 97 out of every 100 men are dependent at the age of 65 on the charity of relatives or the public.

This is even more amazing when we realize that—the majority of men and women have sufficient earning power to make themselves financially independent.

Why, then, are 97 out of every 100 men failures? BECAUSE they overlook the first rule. It is not what they earn but what they manage that will make them financially independent.

To build an independent income you must follow a definite plan in managing the money you earn.

"Union Services"

A SERMONETTE
BY REV. GEORGE F. GROVES
Pastor, Central Christian Church

BEGINNING June 24, and continuing for 10 weeks, nine churches, located in the up-town district of our city will unite in holding their Sunday evening services.

This program of co-operation, in coming together for worship, is to be commended. The temporary giving up of evening meetings, in the various churches concerned, should not be looked upon as a chance to escape responsibility for a season, but a great opportunity, not only to bring into closer relationship the religious forces of our city, but to join in the world-wide effort to promote christian union.

The gain to each church will be in direct proportion to what they put into these meetings. Such efforts cultivate a more intimate acquaintance with the religious leadership of our city, promote a better understanding of those holding a different faith, broaden our vision of service, foster a spirit of co-operation between the churches, and enables us to more adequately minister to the spiritual needs of the community.

These union services are only one of the many influences, going on over the world, to bring together again the various groups of a divided church. They remind us that Christ's prayer was that his followers "might be one." With a united front, the apostolic church moved forward, and in three centuries His disciples had changed the thinking and ideal of pagan nations, and "turned the streams of history into new channels." A united and spirit-filled church is able to lead in the solution of every problem in this present age.

During the summer months we will have the opportunity to mingle together in these union services. May they contribute much toward the deepening of the spiritual life of our community, and to the answering of our Master's prayer for a united church.

CONVENTION TO BE BIG EVENT

Marion County Sending Representatives to Ohio Sunday School Meet

Marking the close of the most constructive year in the history of the Council of Religious Education, the sixty-ninth Ohio Sunday School Convention will be held at Van Wert, June 19-22. A number of Marion County church representatives plan to attend according to Mrs. R. W. Kauble, who as secretary of the Marion County Council, is in charge of credentials from this section.

Thursday night a pageant will be given for the delegates as a special feature of the conference.

Institute Program

A vacation school institute for the training of vacation school leaders will be conducted under the direction of Miss Adella Sterrett of Cleveland and each afternoon for the four days there will be conferences for children's workers, young people's leaders, adult workers and the administration group. Three banquets are provided—for state and county officers, for children's workers and for young people and their leaders. Week-day conferences will be held under direction of Miss Blanche Carrier of Dayton and a great choir composed of singers of Van Wert County will sing each night.

Among the achievements of the Council are the passing of New York in enrollment in week-day schools. It is also conceded that in the quality of the work the Ohio Council has passed all other states. Ohio stands in the lead in vacation schools and in leadership training.

SUBSTITUTE PLANNED FOR MORTON CIRCUS

Kadgar Grotto Arranges To Get Show Through Gus Sun Agency

Announcement was made today by Jack Ganoe of plans for replacing the defunct Bob Morton circus, which was scheduled to show here this week under the auspices of Kadgar Grotto, local Masonic organization, with a circus to be secured through the Gus Sun Booking Agency of Springfield.

While only tentative plans have been completed for the new show it is said by representatives of the booking agency that the circus to be sent here will be larger and will carry a greater repertoire of acts than the show scheduled for this week.

Ganoe also said that the circus may be brought here for the days instead of three, as was the plan for the Bob Morton show.

The Bob Morton circus, which was scheduled to open here last Monday afternoon failed to appear when it landed in financial difficulties in Gary, Ind.

The Grotto circus committee, of which Ganoe is chairman, will meet next Tuesday night to complete plans for the show.

there. A refugee camp soon will be in operation.

The break of the St. Francis River levee followed another break in the levee of the White River near Newport, Ark., where more than 100 families were made homeless by the swollen waters.

It was hoped the levee in the White River would relieve the pressure against other levees further south, but engineers said the flood waters would return to the White River a few miles south.

Four towns are in the path of the raging White River waters. They are Tupelo, Auvergne, Shaffner and Weldon.

A 50-foot section of the 17-mile levee gave way, and the gap is constantly growing larger. More than a half million acres of land drained by the White River and its tributaries have been inundated.

Iowa Village Celebrates Hoover Nomination for Two Days

West Branch, Ia., June 16—West Branch jammed today and went reluctantly back to work after a two days' carnival in celebration of the nomination of Herbert Hoover, the man who put West Branch on the map by being born here.

The natives have been whooping it up day and night since Thursday night when the radio brought in the big news from Kansas City.

The demonstration reached its climax last night when 4,000 persons, congregated from all parts of eastern Iowa, joined the 800 inhabitants of West Branch in an all-night jamboree in honor of "our own Herb."

MAJOR BALDINGER IN COUNTY PRIMARY RACE

Seeks Election to General Assembly, Where He Served as Page Years Ago

Unusual interest is centered locally in the candidacy of Major Ora M. Baldinger, who filed his declartion yesterday as a candidate for Marion County representative to the General Assembly of Ohio, Baldinger is seeking the Republican nomination.

Born and reared in the city of Marion, Major Baldinger has had a notable career in business and military affairs. He is now on the retired list as a regular army officer and is in charge of the Harding Memorial home.

Should Baldinger be sent to the legislature, it will not be his first experience in the statehouse. In 1903, through recommendation of the late President Harding, he was appointed a page in the House by L. B. McNeal, then Marion County representative. The next year, when Mr. Harding entered the State Senate, he had Baldinger transferred to the page corps in the Senate. There Baldinger served while Mr. Harding was a member of the body and later lieutenant-governor.

Major Baldinger was 18 years in the army service in various branches, including engineering. He had extensive experience with legislative work relating to the army.

He served as personal military aide to President Harding.

Major Baldinger obtained his early education in the local schools, attending high school, and later was enrolled at Virginia Military Institute and Yale.

convention itself in the platform fight, had virtually all died out today.

Will Offset Rebuke

The responsible leaders of the party believe that Curtis' nomination of Hoover will eventually offset the effect of Lowden's stinging rebuke to his party. They concede that Lowden is extremely popular from Indiana westward to the Rockies, and that his views carry weight with the farmers of that region. But they do not believe that Lowden, even in his bitterest moments, would essay to lead any open revolt against the Republican party this autumn. They say he may remain silent, that he may give aid to the Hoover-Curtis ticket, but they do not believe it will go any further than that.

The vision of Frank O. Lowden, admittedly the only man now that "Fighting Bob" LaFollette is dead, becoming the symbol of a third party movement in the West is to them an impossible one. Lowden is a Republican of some 40 years regularity. He are most of the men who fought with him in Kansas City—Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, Vice President Dawes and Senator Curtis himself, who now has consented to stand on the platform this convention adopted. So were most of their friends. Hence they believe the threat of a third party agrarian movement this fall is an idle one.

Gus Blames Lowden

The representatives of the anti-Hoover coalition have been doing a great deal of post-mortemizing since Thursday night, seeking to place "the blame" for their defeat and Hoover's nomination.

There are a number of versions and opinions. Most of the coalition leaders in private conversation, however, agree that [illegible] of the coalition leaders, who [illegible] controlled the votes [illegible] the delegates.

Hoover and Curtis.

Whether it was due to the collective wisdom of a number of Republican leaders or that of some particular one, is of little consequence; the action taken by the Kansas City convention, Friday afternoon, in nominating Senator Charles Curtis for the vice presidency must be generally recognized as one of excellent political acumen. Having named Herbert Hoover as its candidate for the presidency, the Republican party was assured a ticket which would be strong in its appeal to the country, but the selection of the able Kansan as his running-mate adds decidedly to that appeal.

In the primary campaign brought to its conclusion this week, Mr. Hoover encountered unquestioned opposition in the western grain belt. That it was so strong as the leaders allied against him held out is most decidedly questionable. This opposition naturally was magnified by that portion of the Republican press favorable to other candidates and the Democratic press as a whole, which recognized Mr. Hoover as the strongest candidate for the Republican nomination and played what may be said to have been good politics on its part. But such as this opposition was, it was as good as effaced by the nomination of the Kansas senator to a place on the ticket, which, as it stands, is wholly a western one in its personnel.

In Hoover and Curtis, the Republican party has a ticket which is acclaimed for its excellence by the party rank and file and is conceded to be an unusually strong one by the opposition party.

To Be a Notable Campaign.

Evidences accumulate that the presidential campaign of 1928 is destined to prove one of the most notable in the history of our government. Already, situations and conditions bearing upon it which are markedly exceptional have arisen. Already we have witnessed many departures from the ordinary, a number of them unique. The effect of some of them will undoubtedly prove negligible. What may be the effect of others is "upon the knees of the gods."

We have seen a president, who months and months ago announced that he did not choose to be a candidate to succeed himself, sufficiently strong in party esteem to dominate the platform on which the one chosen to make the race to succeed him is to run. We have seen the candidate of a great party selected through the will of the members of that party rather than through the will of party leaders. We have seen the party nominating convention ratify that selection on the first and only ballot by an overwhelming vote. For the first time, we behold the West in the saddle, so far as the Republican ticket is concerned, the presidential candidate being a citizen of California and his running-mate, a citizen of Kansas. We have seen a daughter second the nomination of her father as a candidate for the vice presidency, and we have seen all those whose names have been presented for nomination for the second place on the ticket—save the one chosen—withdraw in the interest of harmony.

Now let us look to the other side of the political fence.

It is very probable that, just as Secretary Herbert Hoover was nominated to head the Republican ticket on the first ballot at Kansas City, so will Governor Al. Smith be chosen by Democracy as its standard-bearer. If this probability becomes an actuality despite the handicap of the Democratic two-thirds rule, both presidential candidates will have been nominated on the first ballot, a situation decidedly out of the ordinary. One comes from the Pacific coast, the other from the Atlantic; thus so far as the heads of the two old party tickets are concerned, we have the West arrayed against the East.

The Republican party has come out in its platform more strongly for temperance than ever before. What the Democratic platform declaration may be is yet a matter of conjecture, but it doesn't greatly matter. After all is said, the candidate is usually the platform, and the general feeling is that the wet influence will be found in large part behind Mr. Smith, and the dry, in the main, behind Mr. Hoover. Thus the campaign will show another distinct line of cleavage.

We have heard much regarding this and that issue to be prominent in the campaign, but it has long been our belief that platform promises of future performance are not the impelling influences which move the voter. It has been our observation that a presidential candidate usually enunciates a platform of his own and that the pledges and promises made by him usually carry greater weight with the voter than the declarations of the platform framed in the convention of his party.

The influence of a candidate of recognized personal worth, probity and ability, whose past achievements may be taken as earnests of future performance, who is known to the electorate for his accomplishments rather than as an expounder of theories, can hardly be overestimated. And if it so happens that he stands for election as the candidate of a party of constructive policies, the history of which is one of development under which the country has thrived and enjoyed prosperous conditions, his appeal is almost irresistible and he becomes the great factor of his campaign.

We don't blame Chang Tso-Lin a bit for indignantly denying that he is dead, if he's sure about it, but one who has so often been ruthlessly slain by the cables can hardly get away from the fact that his being alive is shadowed by doubt.

Voting on the refusal of Premier Poincare to discuss the release from prison of a number of communist deputies, the French chamber of deputies gave the premier a 342-to-167 vote of confidence, which rather indicates that France yet has some distance to travel before going to the dogs in a governmental way.

The world will hope that it proves a true one.

It's an interesting development that both the two leaders in the proposed march of "100,000 embattled farmers" on Kansas City were Democrats, one of them a delegate to the coming Houston convention. There's no getting away from the fact that politics is a great game.

Inveigled into a Paris joint to get a cup of "wonderful American coffee," a Milwaukee man found $400 and his return ticket missing when he recovered from the effects of the dope. In a coalition of the South and West, a Washington despatch states, Senator Nye sees a means of ending what he terms is the "rule of absolutism" of the industrial Northeast. Gerald may take our word for it that the country as a whole will prove far more willing to stand for the "rule of absolutism" of the Northeast than the radicalism of the Northwest. The country is certainly getting mighty tired of the antics of Gerald and his fellow-radicals.

Fatal Pleasures Not Normal.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

There is a prayer to be found in the words of Pascal. He proposes to ask of God the proper use of sickness:

"Yes, Lord, I confess that I have esteemed health a blessing, not because it is an easy means for serving Thee with utility, for accomplishing more cares and vigils in Thy service, and for the assistance of my neighbor; but because by its aid I could abandon myself with less restraint to the abundance of the delights of life, and better relish fatal pleasures."

I do not agree with Pascal. I doubt if perfect health ever leads to loss of moral restraint, or tends to "fatal pleasures."

Many, if not most, of the appetites for such pleasures are founded on perversions of health. We are not likely to be conscious of any part of the body until it is congested and disturbed by ill-health or appetite.

The latest advances in the treatment of brain disorder indicate that infection of some organ remote from the head is responsible for the mental aberration. In many instances the disturbance may be so slight as not to be recognized, but yet be sufficient to drive the victim out of his accustomed path of rectitude.

The appearance of health is not sufficient. It must be health founded on normal function of normal organs. Otherwise there may be such tendencies as Pascal bemoans.

Nothing is more deceptive than the superficial aspects of health. If you are unfamiliar with the real evidences, for instance, tuberculosis, you may be misled. Visit one of the many splendid tuberculosis sanitariums or camps in North America and you will see bright-eyed, tanned and red-cheeked boys and girls who will appear to the layman as perfectly healthy and normal persons. Pascal may have been deceived, as you would be, by such outward signs of health.

The proper use of sickness, as I see it, is to do the best one can do to overcome it, and, with God's help, to be restored to health. I should never seek sickness as a means of escaping temptation, because, as I have indicated, I do not believe perfect health is capable of leading to a desire for fatal pleasures.

If I were a preacher, I should proclaim first the gospel of good health, knowing that when my congregation had been restored to physical normality, it would not be difficult to lead them into the ways of pleasantness and the paths of peace. Hunger of stomach and the abnormal yearnings and appeals of other organs are due to neglect of simple rules of wisdom. Give us first good health, then everything else that is good will be added to our heritage.

Editorial Opinion.

CHINA'S CIVIL WAR HAS NOT YET ENDED.

Even sooner than expected, the "unification" of China complacently proclaimed by the victorious Nationalists has been revealed as a pretentious fiction. If it would be unfair to accept all the current reports of dissension, many of which are fabricated by enemies of the successful revolution, it would be equally reckless to assume that a competent, responsible government has been or is about to be established in that distracted country.

The recent preliminaries have been promising enough. The Nationalists, advancing against grumbling resistance, gained decisive ascendancy with the withdrawal into Manchuria of Chang Tso Lin, the northern dictator. They occupied Peking, the ancient capital, without bloodshed. Theoretically, the Nanking regime exercises complete sway over all of China except the three northern provinces. But events have ominously fulfilled predictions that cooperation among the three army leaders would not survive the test of dividing the power they were about to win.

At request of the Powers, and by agreement with the Nationalists, a detachment of northern troops remained in Peking to reinforce the police in preserving order during the transfer of the city. But as they were leaving, the mission accomplished, they were disarmed and imprisoned by order of Marshal Feng Hu-hsiang, one of the three southern commanders; he has truculently ignored demands for their release, and the Nanking government is either too indifferent or too feeble to make good its pledge of safe conduct.

Feng, as a matter of fact, i. a military autocrat who can and does act without the slightest regard for the so-called government. Although he is a member of the Nationalist central executive committee he is beyond its control, and has been a military ally rather than a loyal partner in the revolutionary movement. All indications are that he plans to dislodge the Nationalist troops officially designated to occupy Peking, and seize the capital with his own forces. Meanwhile, he threatens a drive against Tien-Tsin, where 80,000 northern soldiers are still concentrated, prepared to extract payment either from the city or from Feng, or both, as the price of the withdrawal.

Feng, at any rate, is now the dominant figure. General Chiang Kai-shek, the Nationalist generalissimo, has resigned that office. His proclaimed reason is that "the military phase of the revolution has been completed," but the real explanation is that intrigues and the power of Feng have made a mockery of his leadership. In a word, the ostensible triumph of the revolution apparently has not ended the civil war, but merely introduced a new phase of it, and the Nanking government, which is peremptorily demanding recognition from the Powers, is unrecognised by the strongest military force in the country, which is still in the field under the command of the most ambitious and most adroit of the rival leaders.—Philadelphia Record.

A GET-TOGETHER PLEA.

The address which Senator George H. Moses delivered as permanent chairman of the Republican national convention was an appeal for good sportsmanship within the ranks of the party and an invitation to the delegates to forget differences which have arisen among them over matters of policy and over preferences with respect to candidates once the matters under contest have been settled by convention action, and to remember that it is their big job to get together as Republicans and go out and "lick the enemy."

More or less delicately, the senator urged his hearers not to be as the Democrats are, but to settle their differences within their ranks without nursing sore spots or developing splits which will benefit the foe. And if it is not strictly true that Republicans have always followed just the course the permanent chairman indicated, the senator can justify a slight exaggeration in saying that they have by arguing that harmony after any dispute, no matter however acrid, is at least a party tradition; and he might have said in speaking to the convention that the preservation of this party tradition has been responsible for some of the greatest Republican triumphs while the absence of it among the Democrats has been a material reason for some of their worst discomfitures. Although the disagreements in Kansas City are nowhere nearly as acute as some dolorous forecasters prophesied they would be, the breeze of fresh air which Senator Moses sent through a rather stagnant, stolid gathering certainly did no harm and probably had a distinctly healthful effect.—Detroit Free Press.

The Gravitation Mystery.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"How did astronomers explain the movements of the planets around the sun and the moons around the planets before Isaac Newton discovered gravitation universally since the system of Copernicus was accepted?"—L. K., Chicago."

They hardly improved upon Copernicus's own notion that "matter is distributed into whole bodies and that each of these wholes moves naturally in a circle or combination of circles, but that when any one whole body is separated into parts which are then left free to move, all the parts rush together in straight lines. Hence the earth with all it contains, and each of the planets, revolve in circles or combinations of circles, but any body such as a stone lifted off the earth's surface and then left free will rush in a straight line toward the center of the earth."—E. J. C. Morton's abstract.

Gilbert, famous for his experiments with magnets in the sixteenth century, thought there was something resembling magnetic attraction which enabled the earth to drag the moon along with it in its journey around the sun. But the earth's own revolution around the sun he could not thus explain.

Kepler, the original discoverer of the forms of the planets' orbits, tried to account for their revolution around the sun by supposing something resembling spokes to connect the sun with the planets, which were thus swept around by the sun's own rotation. But he could not develop this into a satisfactory explanation. Kepler was alive with imagination, and among his fancies was the notion that the moon was endowed with something like an "animal force" which enabled it to keep itself from falling upon the earth, around which it traveled, and toward which it was drawn by some attractive force, similar to that suggested by Gilbert. This imaginary "animal force" recalls the other old fancy, that the planets were pushed around in their orbits by angels or demons assigned to that duty.

The great obstacle to explanation was the inherent distaste of the human mind to the idea of "action at a distance," i. e., of any force acting from one body to another without some material connection between them. This is a result of our constitution, since we are by our nature unable to comprehend anything that does not in some manner affect our physical senses. Newton himself gave up trying to account for the force acting between all particles of matter, whose existence he was compelled to assume as a basis for his law of gravitation.

Having made his assumption of the existence of such a force his mathematics then had plain sailing, and he was able to prove that the revolution of the planets and satellites was maintained solely by an attraction continually directed toward the center, if the orbit was circular, and toward the focus occupied by the attracting body if the orbit was elliptical.

As to the ultimate nature of that force he offered no suggestion, so that it can not be said that the movements of the planets is, philosophically, any better explained since Newton than it was before. He furnished a satisfactory mathematical explanation that enables us to predict the motions of the planets in the future as well as to trace them in the past; but which tells us nothing of the inherent nature, or cause, of the force assumed to be in action. The Einstein relativity theory denies that there is any force, and attempts to account for the facts by a different assumption, viz., that the universe is a continuum made up from a combination of time and space, in which the motions that Newton ascribed to gravitational attraction result from the very constitution of "space-time," and require no force.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 16—There are rumors several poppy parlors have found lodgment amid bizarre setting in the topless towers of Manhattan's skyscrapers. These are not for the past addicts of the dingy Chinatown cellars, but for the rich who have the habit.

Thus, so high above the city's incoherent thunder, they may dream their purple dream with little fear of the raiding axe. It has been estimated there are some 20,000 pipe-smokers in Greater New York, and a large percentage are reputed to be those reared in culture.

Young thrill-seekers dallying along the primrose path of Broadway are frequent among those who develop the "yen." Late and hectic parties often burn emotions to such a low ebb that "trying it once just for fun" reaps its toll.

It is reported two recent debutantes are now in sanitariums in the effort to be freed of the habit the underworld calls "knocking the gong around." It used to be narcotic agents could detect an opium addict by the sickly white pallor indulgence caused.

But today that is difficult. Artificial tanning will produce the bronze of an autumn leaf. The confirmed opium addict rarely drinks intoxicating liquor. A combination of the two results in violent nausea. The addict after a spree is consumed by the "shakes" and a ravaging thirst for water.

Broadway points an accusing finger at several celebrities as being among those who hit the pipe, yet it is probable this is mere gossip. Those who indulge are so clever in concealing their vice that they have been able to fool doctors for years.

The low type of the speakeasy and night club are hang-outs for cicerones of the hop-bazaars. Usually addicts themselves, they are able to throw out conversational "feelers" for prospective patrons. Prices range from $10 in the dives to $150 a night in the gilded salons.

Race track touts are said to be the easiest of all prey to opium addiction. Eighty per cent. of them are reputed users of some sort of drug. The gangster rarely uses opium. It whips up courage with cocaine.

Four plays to be unveiled on Broadway this season were turned out by active New York newspapermen. Two smashing hits of last season were written by members of the same guild. It can no longer be said with a hope that every newspaperman tries to write a play. They now do it, hooray! and successfully.

The charge that the reporter has never been accurately portrayed on the stage was also disproved last season, when two in the same play ran so true to type that you could almost hear the roar of the city room when they talked over the telephone to their offices. Next season Russell Crouse, a real reporter, is scheduled to take a reportorial role in a play by a newspaperman. He should be able to lend distinct histrionic charm, for no matter how much they deny the soft impeachment, most newspapermen are pretty much actors. In fact a bunch of them grouped in front of the Lamb's would not look at all out of place. They simulate the same nonchalance and worldly sophistication, as well as being gifted with similar vanities. The indefinable qualities that made the actor human and likable will be found in the average reporter.

The first reporter to strike pay dirt in playwriting in the past decade is Eugene Walter, who immediately, actor-like, blossomed forth with spats, cane, tweedy things and gaudy motor cars. The legend grew that he spent his first year sleeping on benches in public parks while hawking plays along the Rialto. The truth is that, like all good reporters, he always had a job, and the nearest he came to a park bench was to stop there now and then to puff a good cigar.

Find the reporter who is two jumps ahead of the sheriff in New York and you will probably find he has climbed into spats just like an actor.—Copyright, 1928, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

The Way of the World.

There are so many chances in this world to do something different. If you do believe it note this: The scientific committee of the Large Black Pig society, of England, is offering prizes to any one who can present an effective inking scheme for permanently tattooing black pigs. Don't say the world isn't full of unusual opportunities.

A doctor in a small town in Illinois has bought an aeroplane to use in emergency cases in rural districts. Here is a physician who doesn't think he has to move to a large city to amount to something. He has vision and imagination, and he is going to keep ahead of his times.

When parents pay as much attention to their children's spare time as they do to their jobs they will bring up better children. Too many father and mothers have only one kind of discipline—the discipline that insists on getting the job done. There's a road from spare time to character and grown-ups ought to know the way.

Youngsters of today have to prepare for a new kind of competition. The day of mass competition is over and mind competition has come. The race for place is faster than ever before, and it will be much faster in the future. Even to be the best baseball player on your lot is not going to get you first place in the big race.

Don't ask anybody to notice you. Do noticeable work.

Don't pass up a bore too soon. Get at him in the right way, suggest the right line and you may discover that he is interesting. Let's not be too quick about locking the door and sending out word that we're "in conference."

Twenty Years Ago.

This day was Tuesday.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Stone, of the Garden City pike.

The Marion Commercial club was investigating a tool and specialty company which had made overtures to locate in Marion.

A marriage license was issued to Minnie James and Harry E. Millington.

Marion lost an eleven-inning contest to Portsmouth, Wilmot and Bushelman being the respective pitchers. It was a very ragged fielding game.

"Cumming's Twelve Big Shows," another name for a carnival company, was showing on the Aronhait grounds.

Hundreds of carp were dynamited in the reservoir and canal out at the plant of the Marion Water company.

Monta C. Walters indignantly denied that he had been married, as announced, to a Miss Hall, of Bucyrus, the preceding Sunday.

An "at home" was held at the Cheney home on east Center street by Miss Ethel M. Jones and Miss Alice Cheney in honor of Miss Eudora Siffritt, a bride.

Shouldn't Overlook Them.

When Governor Smith takes time to thank all devoted friends for what they are willing to do to see him nominated, he should not forget the humorous and totally unrecognized service rendered by Senator Heflin.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DEADLINE SET

No 1927 Realty Licenses To Be Renewed After July 1

Columbus, June 16—Rex C. Smith, president of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards, has been informed by the State Board of Real Estate Examiners that no 1927 real estate licenses will be renewed after July 1. The real estate license law does not specify any definite date before which licenses must be renewed, and the attorney general has ruled that a broker may renew within a reasonable length of time. The examining board at its meeting in Cleveland, May 28 and 29, ruled that August 1 would be the deadline this year.

The Ohio Blue Book, which is a roster of all licensed real estate brokers in the State of Ohio, has just been published by the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards and is now ready for distribution to all members of the Real Estate Association. Arrangements have been made through Ohio Real Estate News to furnish the roster to all non-realtor brokers who wish it, Mr. Smith said.

DR. GLENN FRANK TO ADDRESS CONVENTION

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, will address the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its coming annual convention, to be held in Louisville, Ky., June 19-22.

Dr. Frank will talk on "The Realtor as the New Pioneer."

"The pioneer cleared the forest to create farms, the realtor is clearing the farms to create cities," Dr. Frank has pointed out. It is within the province of the present builders of cities to bring beauty and permanency into a civilization to which the pioneer bequeathed ugliness and impermanence, he adds.

Meditations of a Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

May Moonings

THIS is the dangerous season when a man's conscience goes on strike and his heart, pulse and vanity begin working overtime.

A man is never actually old, until he has lost his last desire for the food that makes him dyspeptic, the pleasures that make him poor, and the women who make a fool of him.

After a man has silenced his conscience toward his wife a few times, it just lies down like little Fido, goes to sleep and never troubles him again.

If it were as difficult to get married as it is to get a pre-war drink, marriage certificates would become the craze of the hour. Since the Anti-Saloon League has made drinking so popular and fashionable, why not start an "Anti-Marriage League" to give an impetus to matrimony?

The average man is like a clock; once you get him wound up and started in any direction, you can't STOP him until he either runs down or gets a violent jolt.

A solution of one part flattery to two parts of sweet indifference makes an ideal thermos bottle in which to keep a man's love from growing cold.

At this insidious time of year, a man is almost afraid to PRETEND that he's in love—for fear he may convince himself.

Just Things

LOST AD COLUMNS

Grief by the bale is to be found in the lost ad column of a newspaper. If you are one of the few fortunates who never have known what it is to pour your tale of woe into the shell pink ear of the girl at the lost and found desk, you can't sympathize with the loser and no doubt wonder how any one could have been so dumb, careless, forgetful or whatever it was made them lose such articles as a grip, briefcase, certificate for 100 shares of stock, diamond ring, barpin, wrist watch, sable rockpiece and what not. Isn't it funny how an article doubles, trebles and even quadruples in value once you find it has disappeared apparently for good? And if it's money that's gone, well how many, many things you could buy at only you could find it.

NEW ANNIHILATOR

With the festive and elusive summer time, which really now seems to be in our midst, of course will come the great concourse of pests such as the energetic and busy fly, the non-tiring ants which seem to have an uncanny knowledge of the whereabouts of the picnic supplies and their kindred. Some long suffering soul or maybap someone who has the peace of mind of the housewife at heart, has solved the riddle and invented a contraption which carries a guarantee to put an end to the lives of the varmints, with just a little aid from the person who wishes to play the role of an executioner. The trap has a place, in full view of the victims of course, on which to place the bait, sugar, or what have you, and the only entrance to the feast table is through a funnel shaped door. The result is that they get in and either eat too much and can't get back out through the opening or just don't care what happens, for not one was ever known to join their comrades on the outside world. All the executor has to do is put an end to them by drowning or burning them and set more bait.

The Original "Home, Sweet Home"
At East Hampton, Long Island, still stands the home immortalized by Thomas Howard Payne, who was born 137 years ago this month. Payne achieved fame as poet, writer, actor, editor, and one-time American Consul to Tunis. But, although endowed with unusual talents, he never managed to save for the future, regardless of his income.
While on the verge of starvation in Paris, in 1823, he wrote the opera "Clari, the Maid of Milan" and in it introduced "Home, Sweet Home." In the song Payne wrote the heartache of the wanderer—the man who in old age still misses the joy, the comforts, the security that go with a home one can call one's own.
"Home, Sweet Home" or any other worth-while possession can be yours—if you build a reserve fund through regular deposits here.

The Mystery at Styles

THE YEAR'S MOST BAFFLING SERIAL STORY

BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 19

REALLY can't remember."

The coroner's face grew graver. "Were you in company with anyone?"

"I did not."

"Did you meet anyone on your way?"

"It is a pity," said the coroner severely. "I am to take it then that you refuse to say where you were at the time Mr. Mace positively recognized you as entering the shop to purchase strychnine?"

"You may like to take it that way, monsieur."

"Be careful, Mr. Inglethorp."

Poirot was fidgeting nervously.

"Sacre!" he murmured. "Does this conduct of a man want to be arrested?" Mr. Inglethorp was indeed creating a bad impression. His futile denials would not have convinced a child. The coroner, however, passed briskly to the next point, and Poirot drew a deep breath of relief.

"You had a discussion with your wife on Tuesday afternoon?"

"Pardon me," interrupted Alfred Inglethorp, "you have been misinformed. I had no quarrel with my dear wife. The whole story is absolutely untrue. I was absent from the house the entire afternoon."

"Have you anyone who can testify to that?"

"You have my word," said Inglethorp haughtily.

The coroner did not trouble to reply.

"There are two witnesses who will swear to having heard your disagreement with Mrs. Inglethorp."

"Those witnesses were mistaken."

I was puzzled. The man spoke with such quiet assurance that I was staggered. I looked at Poirot. There was an expression of exultation on his face which I could not understand. Was he at last convinced of Alfred Inglethorp's guilt?

"Mr. Inglethorp," said the coroner, "you have heard your wife's dying words repeated here. Can you explain them in any way?"

"Certainly I can."

"You can?"

"It seems to me very simple. The room was dimly lighted. Mr. Bauerstein is much my height and build, and, like me, wears a beard. In the dim light, and suffering as she was, my poor wife mistook him for me."

"Ah!" murmured Poirot to himself. "But it is an idea, that!"

"You thing it is true!" I whispered.

"I do not say that. But it is truly an ingenious supposition."

"You read my wife's last words as an accusation"—Inglethorp was continuing—"they were, on the contrary, an appeal to me."

The coroner reflected a moment, then he said:

"I believe, Mr. Inglethorp, that you yourself poured out the coffee, and took it to your wife that evening?"

"I poured it out, yes. But I did not take it to her. I meant to do so, but I was told that a friend was at the hall door, so I laid down the coffee on the hall table. When I came through the hall again a few minutes later, it was gone."

This statement might, or might not, be true, but it did not seem to me to improve matters much for Inglethorp. In any case, he had had ample time to introduce the poison.

At that point, Poirot nudged me gently, indicating two men who were sitting together near the door. One was a little, sharp, dark, ferret faced man, the other was tall and fair.

I questioned Poirot mutely. He put his lips to my ear.

"Do you know who that little man is?"

I shook my head.

"That is Detective Inspector James Japp of Scotland Yard—Jimmy Japp. The other man is from Scotland Yard too. Things are moving quickly, my friend."

I stared at the two men intently. There was certainly nothing of the policeman about them. I should never have suspected them of being official personages.

I was still staring, when I was startled and recalled by the verdict being given:

"Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown."

As we came out of the Styles Arms, Poirot drew me aside by a gentle pressure of the arm. I understood his object. He was waiting for the Scotland Yard men.

In a few moments, they emerged, and Poirot at once stepped forward, and accosted the shorter of the two.

"I fear you do not remember me, Inspector Japp."

"Why, if it isn't Mr. Poirot!" cried the inspector. He turned to the other man. "You've heard me speak of Mr. Poirot? It was in 1904 he and I worked together—the Abercrombie forgery case—you remember, he was run down in Brussels. Ah, those were great days, monsieur. Then, do you remember 'Baron Altara'? There was a pretty rogue for you! He eluded the clutches of half the police in Europe. But we nailed him in Antwerp—thanks to Mr. Poirot here."

As these friendly reminiscences were being indulged in, I drew nearer, and was introduced to Detective-Inspector Japp, who in his turn, introduced us both to his companion, Superintendent Summerhaye.

"I need hardly ask what you are doing here, gentlemen," remarked Poirot.

Japp closed one eye knowingly.

"No, indeed. Pretty clear case I should say."

But Poirot answered gravely:

"There I differ with you."

"Oh, come!" said Summerhaye, opening his lips for the first time. "Surely the whole thing is clear as daylight. The man's caught redhanded. How he could be such a fool beats me!"

But Japp was looking attentively at Poirot.

"Hold your fire, Summerhaye," he remarked jocularly. "Me and Monsieur here have met before—and there's no man's judgment I'd sooner take than his. If I'm not greatly mistaken, he's got something up his sleeve. Isn't that so, monsieur?" Poirot smiled.

"I have drawn certain conclusions—yes."

"It's this way," he said, "so far we've only seen the case from the outside. That's where the yard's at a disadvantage in a case of this kind, where the murder's only out, so to speak, after the inquest. A lot depends on being on the spot first thing, and that's where Mr. Poirot's had the start of us. We shouldn't have been here as soon as the even, if it hadn't been for the fact that there was a smart doctor on the spot, who gave us the tip through the coroner. But you've been on the spot from the first, and you may have picked up some little hints."

"From the evidence at the inquest, Mr. Inglethorp murdered his wife as sure as I stand here, and if anyone but you hinted the contrary I'd laugh. I must say I was surprised the jury didn't bring it in wilful murder against him right off. I think they would have, if it hadn't been for the coroner—he seemed to be holding them back."

"Perhaps, though, you have a warrant for his arrest in your pocket now," suggested Poirot.

A kind of wooden shutter of officialdom came down over Japp's expressive countenance.

"Perhaps I have, and perhaps I haven't," he remarked dryly.

Poirot looked at him thoughtfully.

"I am very anxious, Messieurs, that he should not be arrested."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

ME and Jubilee felt better when we woke up this morning. The doctor said last night that Youniss is out of danger, and when my father asked him about me, the doctor said I wasn't in any danger unless I had a sore mouth. He said it don't poison anyone to swallow snake poison, because when it gets in the stummick it digests like food. He said it has to get in a fella's blood to do him any harm. I didn't know that. The doctor said he thought everyone knew that.

I told the bunch about it out in the barn this morning, and they were all there but Feeble and Youniss. I thought Feeble might be in the hospital all ready, but when I had fed my face and we were half way to the pasture with the dummed brutes we hears someone whistle on their fingers and then we saw a girl coming a long ways off. When we got nearer to each other it was Feeble, and when we got nearer she was dragging something by a string, and it was the gosh whoppiest rattlesnake anyone ever saw. I stretched it out straight and laid down by it and it was longer than me. It was the worst beat up snake I ever did see. Feeble looked kinda peeked, but she smiled as wide as ever, and when I asted her where she got it she said she killed it. She said it was the snake that bit Youniss. She said there couldn't be no snake bite a friend of her'n and get away with it, and then she started to cry. I put my arm around her and told her to never mind, and she put her arms around my neck and I never did see anyone cry so hard, and I didn't know what to do. Just then Butch laughed at us, and I ducked away from Feeble and brang one up from the ground and hung it on his nose so hard his nose began to bleed. Then he swung at me and we clinched and rolled all over the road. And when Butch had hollered enough, I let him finish taking the cows out and me and Feeble drug the snake home to Youniss' mother, and she had us take it in a basket to the hospital. The doctor took it and said he would show it to the reporters and have them warn folks that snakes are bad this year and to look out for them.

I had something in my trap and I thought it was a rat and I called the rat and Jubilee and squatted down and opened the trap and out jumped the squirrel and clumb over me and was up on the fence and over the barn before I knowed it. I guess I am getting feeble minded. I might of knowed if I tried to catch the rat the squirrel would but in. I don't care. Youniss keeps getting better.

You can never tell how a girl will look at the breakfast table by the way she looks at the bell.

Love's Awakening

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Finds a Reason for Not Surrendering Her "Individuality"

AS Katherine's low, earnest voice finished her injunction to go to the city and do the work I had contracted to do, adding her renewed promise to take care of Junior during my absence, I cut out my hand impulsively and caught hers in it.

"You've given me the best possible argument for going," I said gratefully, "and you know, don't you, that worry over Junior's care isn't the reason I am debating the question of breaking my contract, for, of course, that is what staying out here for the Winter would mean."

"Oh! my dear!" Her voice was filled with horrified incredulity. "Surely you're not going to give up your work when you've made such a wonderful success of it! And I've heard that Philip Veritzen is bad medicine about anybody breaking a contract with him. But—I forget. You stipulated, didn't you, that if Junior needed you, that would mean an end of your work?"

"Yes, and that is the question I am considering. I know he will not need me as far as care and training are concerned—but—I feel—someway—as if—I had come near losing him—and I don't want him to miss me—ask for me—and not be able to have me."

She tightened her clasp upon my hand.

"I know," she said tenderly. "And you must decide that for yourself. But—will you be hurt if I tell you that I think you are a bit morbid just now. And will you believe me when I say that with the program of school and exercise and play which I am planning for him, he won't have time to miss you or anybody else. Then you've planned to be down week ends, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes," I answered, energetically, banishing the involuntary thrill through me when she said that Junior wouldn't have time to miss me.

"If I may rock the boat a little further," Katherine said with a little smile, "don't promise Junior that you're coming down every single week-end. Leave it vague. Of course, you probably won't have a single one away from him, but you'd better feel like that once in a while you may not be able to get down. Then if anything should happen to prevent you from coming, I can plan some extra outing for him and keep him busy until you do get down."

"I see your point," I said slowly, still battling that mean little thrill of jealousy, "and, if I decide to go to the city, I shall act upon it."

Katherine's face was troubled, and it was several seconds before she answered. Then she spoke hesitantly:

"Madge dear, you know we never have given each other unasked advice, but—I can't help asking you not to make the mistake I did."

Wonder at her meaning was mingled with my haste to assure her of my readiness to hear whatever she wished to say to me.

"Please, tell me what you mean," I adjured her. "What mistake?"

"My fatal mistake with Jack," she said steadily, although I guessed what it must be costing her thus to refer to her absent husband.

"Just a second, dear," I told her. "Jack is my cousin, the only brother I ever knew, but, knowing both him and you, I am sure that in your relations, it was Jack who was at fault, not you."

"No, no," she said vehemently, and I wondered if her conscience was being pricked by her remembrance of Hal Meredith's anxiety to have the estrangement between herself and her husband become a permanent thing. "I didn't know how to manage Jack, I gave in to him, surrendered my individuality when I should have insisted upon keeping it. I don't want you to make the same mistake."

Gas—The Builder

Gas has advanced civilization. It has given to homes comforts that would not have been dreamed of fifty years ago. It has lightened the burden of housework—made possible the growth of industries—developed villages into cities—created employment for labor.

The city with the adequate gas supply does not have to bid for industry. That is the reason Your Gas Company is so eager to be able to assure Marion of a permanent supply of gas. It wants to help Marion grow—to prosper. All it asks is the recognition of the fact that GAS IS WORTH MORE.
